

Contents

Preface: Abstract machinexi

Acknowledgments..... xv

Part 1: GIS and the digital humanities 1

1. Introduction..... 3

From Lascaux to the Sea of Tranquility.....4

What is a GIS?.....4

GIS and the digital humanities.....7

Contents.....8

2. Toward the spatial turn 11

A brief history of Western geographical thought12

Post-structuralist perspectives.....16

Deep mapping.....17

GIS and the space of conjecture.....19

3. Writing time and space with GIS: The conquest and mapping of seventeenth-century Ireland23

Period, place, and GIS.....23

Geovisualizing Irish history25

Rebellion and conquest in 3D.....26

Surveying the Cromwellian Settlement.....29

William Petty and the Down Survey31

From the ballybetagh to the barony.....33

The *Books of Survey and Distribution*35

Database mapping the *Books*36

Visualizing the webs of history41

Part 2: Writers, texts, and mapping..... 45

4. GIS and the poetic eye	47
Mapping Kavanagh	47
Bakhtinian GIS	49
Creating a digital dinnseanchas	50
Plotting the poetic eye.....	57
5. Modeling and visualizing in GIS: The topological influences of Homer’s Odyssey and Dante’s Inferno on James Joyce’s Ulysses (1922).....	61
Joycean cartographies.....	61
Homer and Dante’s topologies.....	63
Modeling Ulysses	64
The topologies of Ulysses	65
Upper Hell.....	67
Middle of Hell (City of Dis).....	70
Lower Hell.....	72
Purgatory	74
Visualizing a “new Inferno in full sail”	76
6. Psychogeographical GIS: Creating a “kaleidoscope equipped with consciousness,” Flann O’Brien’s At Swim-Two-Birds (1939)	83
The novel as urban GIS.....	83
Spatializing At Swim-Two-Birds	84
Psychogeographical mapping with GIS	85
Vico-Bakhtin timespaces.....	88
Counter-cartographical GIS.....	93
7. Geovisualizing Beckett	97
Samuel Beckett’s GIS timeline.....	97
Geovisual narratology.....	99
Dublin-Paris, 1916–30.....	103
Beckett’s bottled climates.....	106

London, 1933–35.....110
 France, 1945–46111
Bricolage and biography116

Part 3. Toward a humanities GIS119

8. The terrae incognitae of humanities GIS 121

The lost mapmaker..... 121
 The map theater 122
 The geographer’s science and the storyteller’s art..... 124

About the author..... 129

Index 131