Esri Environmental and Natural Resources eBrief

Esri Sponsoring the Natural Areas Association Virtual Conference—The Power of Long-Term Ecological Research: Informing Natural Areas Management

This one-day, virtual event will highlight important Long-Term Ecological Research (LTER) projects that can inform the work of land management practitioners from multiple ecosystems, including prairie and grassland, forest, coastal, lacustrine/riverine, and dryland.

Register Now →

Wisconsin: Using Maps to Tackle "Forever Chemicals"

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (Wisconsin DNR) created a tool to capture levels of dangerous chemicals in the water and guide remediation efforts.

Learn More →

More News in Environment and Natural Resources

Cities Save Lives by Mapping Communities Most at Risk from Extreme Heat

Location-based data from sensors and scientific research populates interactive maps to identify where dangerous heat impacts vulnerable residents.

Read the Blog →

The Analytics You Need to Better Monitor and Act for Conservation

This interactive map explores how Esri partner Skytec leverages cutting-edge satellite technology, artificial intelligence, and advanced geospatial analysis to provide near real-time insights for change detection and remote monitoring.

Explore the Interactive Map →

Developing a Collaborative Relationship with Stormwater Regulators

With GIS-based stormwater management software from 2NDNATURE, Salinas, California, has reduced both the cost and complexity of all aspects of the city's stormwater program.

Learn How →

DEVELOP AN EQUITY STRATEGIC PLAN WITH GIS

DOWNLOAD THE GUIDE

esri