

ArcGIS Open Data is ready for you.

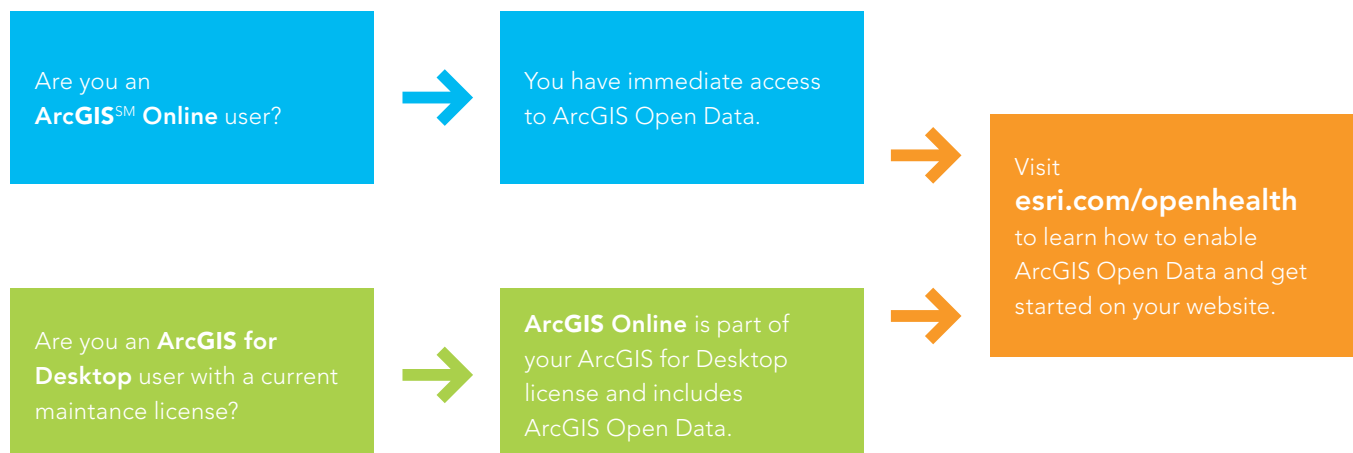

The key to unlocking your data just got a lot easier. And you may not need to spend a penny more on software. Here's how:

ArcGIS® Open Data gives you the tools to break down the communication barriers in your community and drive engagement in one of the most intuitive ways—via maps. Whether you want to plot farmers' markets, show child care locations, or visualize vulnerable populations, everything you need to open your data in a matter of minutes may be available through your existing technology.

Join health and human services organizations throughout the nation that are already leveraging their ArcGIS investment as their open data backbone to improve health disparities, connect communities with resources, and much more. Start easily sharing the information you've collected, curated, and maintained.

Follow these simple steps to get started right now:

To learn how to configure your ArcGIS Open Data website and make it public, contact your Esri representative or call 888-377-4575.

